Pakistan Is Nominated By Allies As Neutral Custodian For POW's

Offer Made As Peace Talks Resume

PANMUNJOM, Monday, May 4 (AP)—The United Nations today nominated Pakistan as the neutral custodian to supervise war prisoners refusing to go home after an armistice in Korea.

Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison Jr., senior Allied truce delegate, nominated the Asian nation shortly after the armistice talks were resumed at 11 a.m. after a one-day layoff.

Communist reaction to the nomination was not reported immediately. The meetings are closed. However, the Reds had named Pakistan—with India, Burma and Indonesia—as their choices for possible nomination as a neutral.

Respond To Proposal

The Communists responded to the proposal by asking for a recess at 11:41 a.m. until 11 a.m. Tuesday. The Allies readily agreed.

Previously, the U.N. Command had suggested Switzerland for the job of supervising some 50,000 North Korean and Chinese Communist prisoners who have said they would resist being returned home.

The men were among a group of 20 flown back to Valley Forge Military Hospital last Friday night in a secrecy-shrouded trip from Tokyo.

The Air Force said the Pentagon imposed security measures in connection with the flight "because of the position taken by the Army and others that these men may have been misled under conditions of duress and hardship during the period of their captivity."

Ten Agree To Plan

Ten of them agreed to take part in a news conference today, two at a time, to "try to remove some of the false stigma that has come our way."

Four refused to take part in the conference and a hospital spokesman said their action was based on their "bitterness over the whole situation."

The remainder, including those bed-ridden, were too weak to undergo questioning, or did not care to take part because they wanted to be with their recently-arrived families.

All those interviewed expressed surprise over the idea that any of the members of their group should be considered pro-Communist.

One, Cpl. James L. Ball, 21, of Bellbrook, W. Va., said, "this Red label makes us feel like criminals. We are all completely innocent."

Another of the interviewed groups said they had been given a "dirty deal" in the form of a "Red label" on their return to the U.S.

They were Pfc. Roger Herndon, 20, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Cpl. Vernon L. Warren, 22, of St. Louis. Herndon, who lost his right arm because of a machine-gun wound suffered at the time of his capture in November, 1950, said he was perfectly willing to go back to Korea for "another crack at the Reds" despite his wound which would prevent any return to the U.S.

That could have important political repercussions. The chief sponsor of the bill before the committee is Rep. Simpson (R-Pa), chairman of the Congressional Campaign Committee—the group that will work with Eisenhower to try to hold and strengthen Republican control of the House in the 1954 election.

Economically, more than two score witnesses told the committee last week, the issue means life or death to scores of American industries allegedly threatened with destruction by growing imports of cheaper foreign goods.

Internationally, relations with free world allies will be affected. Britain, France, Germany, Japan and other foreign nations have argued eagerly that they need to sell more products here to bolster their short supply of dollars.

In all, the U.N. turned over 6,670 Reds—870 more than originally estimated. In return, the Allies received 684 disabled Allied soldiers, including 149 Americans—79 more than the Communists promised.

RANTOUL, Ill., May 3 (INS)—An air force officer from Battle Creek, Mich., who suffered a heart attack while in Korea, arrived at Chanute Air Force Base today aboard an army transport plane carrying six returning former prisoners.

Soldier Talks Young Model Out Of Jump From Tower

SANTA MONICA, Calif., May 3 (INS)—A 20-year-old Hollywood model perched precariously atop a 140-foot water tower for seven hours today, threatening to leap to her death over the break up of a romance with a young G. I.

The girl, Mrs. Teresa (Terry) Cundall McKinney, finally was talked out of jumping by the soldier with whom she had quarreled. Pvt. Robert Berman of Camp Roberts.

Berman pleaded with her for an hour before she yielded to his entreaties.

After agreeing not to jump she permitted three firemen to place a safety belt around her before she wearily returned to the ground.

The girl, a divorcee and the mother of two small sons, climbed the tower at 7:45 a.m. (10:45 a.m. EDT) and for hours held a crowd of hundreds spellbound with her threat to leap at any moment.

Firemen, a life-long friend and a Presbyterian minister pleaded with her to come down off the lofty Mt. Olivet tower.

She shouted defiantly at them: "It's my life. I can take it if I want to."

She added that she was waiting for Berman to show up. She said: "I want to show him something he won't forget. I'm tired of the world and sick of life."

For one tense moment, as the 21-year-old Berman climbed to the rim of the tank it looked as though Mrs. McKinney was going to leap.

Then she relaxed and began talking to the soldier.

However, it is not believable that those who spend their money on advertising on radio and television can afford the involvements that this attitude will bring upon them. It is not only a lazy attitude; it is unjust; it is a rejection of every decent American principle of life, for it not only rejects a person's right to principles of life, but it denies him the opportunity to change his mind, to confess, to be contrite and to remedy his situation. It fails to grasp the significance of anti-Marxism in the arts.

Hospital Day is a nationwide event, celebrated by all types of hospitals — military, civilian and veterans. Hospital Day commemorates the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale. Born of English parents in Florence, Italy, on May 12, 1820, Florence Nightingale richly deserves her place in history for her outstanding nursing services to British soldiers during the Crimean War.

After the war, she returned to England where she established a unit at St. Thomas Hospital in London to train nurses. Here was the first such school in the world. Its value and importance set the example for a continuance and expansion of similar nursing services to care for the sick, wounded, and disabled.

They also claim the hotel is legally responsible for the ice as it was not caused by any negligence of the store owners. Judge Harris in granting the demurrer eliminated the jewelry store as a defendant in the suit.

Representing the hotel at the hearing was W. Earle Cobey, while Harold S. Naughton was attorney for the plaintiff.

Yohn Retires As Railroader

A veteran Western Maryland Railway locomotive engineer, George C. Yohn, 68, of Potomac Park, retired Friday after 31 years service with the company.

During his long career he had only one reportable injury and was never in any serious train accidents.

Yohn entered the service in 1922 in the Mechanical Department. On October 14, 1925 he was transferred to the Transportation Department as a locomotive fireman. On July 22, 1934, he was promoted to locomotive engineer.

During his service as fireman and engineer he served mostly on the Cumberland-Elkins Division and never reported late for duty during his 31 years service.

Recently he operated the switch engine at the Luke mill of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company. He has a son, Lester, living in Washington, D. C.

He expects to spend his time hunting and fishing and doing gardening work. He and Mrs. Yohn are building a new home at Rawlings on the McMullen Highway.

A truck from the Church World Service Center at New Windsor, Md., will be in Cumberland tomorrow morning, May 12, to pick up materials for relief. These materials are processed by Church World Service and are sent to Germany, Korea, Holland and other places where needy persons are located.

Donations of food, clothing, shoes and fats may be brought to the Living Stone Church of the Brethren, Second and Cedar Streets, or to the First Presbyterian Church, Washington Street, before Monday evening, May 11.

These collections are made every three months. A total of 7780 pounds of materials has been donated in the past year from this area.

To Attend Meeting.

A large delegation from Cumberland is expected to attend the annual meeting of the Maryland State Dental Association which opened in Baltimore yesterday.

Civic Symphony Sets Final Concert May 19

The final of four concerts this season will be given by the Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra Tuesday, May 19, at Allegany High School auditorium under auspices of the Junior Woman's Civic Club. Regina Butta, Baltimore soprano, will be the soloist. According to S. Lula Syckes, conductor, the orchestra will be heard in an all-new program.

They also claim the hotel is legally responsible for the ice as it was not caused by any negligence of the store owners. Judge Harris in granting the demurrer eliminated the jewelry store as a defendant in the suit.

Representing the hotel at the hearing was Earle Cobey, while Harold S. Naughton was attorney for the plaintiff.

Airline Reenacts Two Bits Of U.S. Aviation History

By VERN HAUGLAND
Associated Press Aviation Writer

BALTIMORE, May 3 (AP) — Eastern Air Lines re-enacted two bits of aviation history Friday: The original Wright brothers' flight, and the first regular airmail service along the East Coast through Washington, D. C.

William H. Boone, Hollywood stunt flier, fitted with goggles and leather flying cap, perched upon the open seat at the front of a 1910 biplane-type airplane, gunned the eight-cylinder Curtis engine, and sent the plane rolling down a runway at Friendship Airport near here.

After a long, hesitating run the plane rose shakily into the air—at a speed of about 45 miles an hour—and flew along about 10 feet off the ground for almost half a mile.

The flight was intended by Eastern, as part of its 25th anniversary celebration and the observance of the golden anniversary of powered flight, to demonstrate the achievement of the Wright brothers in 1903.

Boone said he flew considerably farther than the Wright Brothers did, but had in the pusher-type plane a World War I Curtis engine, considerably more powerful than that used at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Meanwhile Eugene R. Brown, who opened the first air mail route from Atlanta through Washington and Philadelphia to New York May 1, 1928, repeated the 792-mile journey in an aged Pitcairn Mailwing plane of the same type used on the initial flight.

Brown left Atlanta in early morning, made stops on schedule along the way, and "buzzed" Friendship Airport promptly at the end of a "press preview" of a showing of old and new aircraft which Eastern offered at Friendship Saturday and Sunday.

Brown carried a capacity load of 300 pounds of mail, just as he did on the first flight 25 years ago.

The air show was opened by Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern and a fighter ace of World War I. Maryland Governor Theodore R. McKeldin, Baltimore Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro Jr., and Civil Aeronautics Board Vice Chairman Harman Denny were among about 500 onlookers.

The Army demonstrated a Hiller H-23 helicopter in aerial maneuvers, and a piston-engine World War II F-51 Mustang and a Korean-War F-96 Sabre jet made formation passes over the field.

W. Va. Treasurer To Speak Here

Coming here from Charleston to address the Cumberland Lions Club Wednesday noon at Central YMCA is William H. Ansel, Jr., the 16th treasurer of the State of West Virginia, who was born at Springfield, Hampshire County, only 20 miles from Cumberland. He was educated in the public schools of Hampshire County, Potomac State School, Keyser; Shepherd College and the College of Law, West Virginia University, Morgantown. He taught school for eight years in Hampshire County, and in 1942, was elected to the House of Delegates and was re-elected for two succeeding terms. During his tenure in the Legislature he was instrumental in having legislation adopted beneficial to the road and school systems of West Virginia.

He practiced law for one year at Romney; was then appointed Assistant Attorney General. In December, 1949, he was appointed Treasurer of the State and in 1950 was elected to the unexpired term, leading the state ticket in both the primary and general elections. In 1952, he was elected to a full term, being the youngest person ever elected to that office in the history of the state.

His wife is the former Helen Kauffman of Cumberland and they are the parents of three daughters. He is a member of the Methodist Church. J. Lewis Ort, program chairman, will introduce Ansel, whose subject is: "A State's Financial Problems."

During its history the state of Florida has been under the rule of four different countries—England, France, Spain and the United States.

Prices Edge Up Again

Since last November when the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that its consumer price index had reached a record high, prices have been going down. That is, they went down from month to month in December, January and February. The reading for March 15, just released, shows a reversal in the trend.

It isn't much of a reversal, and most economists expect the reversal to be reversed. The index stood at 113.4 in February—as compared to 114.3 last November—and on March 15 it stood at 113.6. If the rise continues, however, the shrunken dollar will keep on shrinking.

Inflations bring price rises—but not all prices rise at the same time or to the same degree. For instance, rents in the last 12 years have risen only slightly—due to government fiat—but obviously they cannot be held down indefinitely unless other prices recede.

There are sensitive commodities and sensitive goods, even sensitive services, that respond quickly to inflationary factors. Other commodities and goods are sluggish. So it may take years, after an initial stimulus, before the readjustment is complete.

When there are repeated stimuli it is impossible to predict when the process will end. There have been repeated stimuli since 1948, and especially since 1950. Perhaps the nation has not yet absorbed their full impact.

The bureau noted that prices had not risen appreciably by reason of removal of price controls. But that is true of consumer goods generally, not all wholesale prices. A few adjustments were necessary, and there may be others to come.

The encouraging aspect of the price situation is that prices have been relatively stable over a period of four months. If they continue to hold in the immediate weeks ahead, real stability may be possible.

Better Functioning

On the face of it, the work of the Rockefeller Committee, which is being used as a basis for the proposed reorganization of the State and Defense Departments, looks like a duplication in itself.

All this sort of thing was supposed to have been done by the Hoover Commission task force, which started operating five years ago. Actually, however, the Rockefeller group's purview has been the better functioning, rather than the more economical operation of government. With the former should come some of the latter.

The basic philosophy which has guided the overhauling of the State Department is one of getting that department out of operations and placing it back in the policy making business.

Thus, information and propaganda functions would be removed from State control and placed under a separate agency, called the U. S. Information Service, under the direction of Dr. Robert Johnson. Similarly, Point Four activities and other aid programs would be taken from State and handed to the Mutual Security Administration. MSA would be stripped of information activities.

In the Defense Department the problem was to revert to civilian control, a task roughly comparable to the labors of Hercules. The Rockefeller group proposed to sweep the overstuffed and rather turgid Munitions Board, and several other boards, right out the front doors of the Pentagon, lodging their responsibilities with key individuals with small staffs.

A process which would redefine the mission and responsibilities of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to bring them closer to the secretary of Defense, is something that has needed doing for almost as long as the Joint Chiefs setup has been in operation.

Detailed reorganization plans will be submitted to Congress quite soon, President Eisenhower has revealed.

Spring House-Cleaning

Acting on the recommendations of his Government Reorganization Committee, President Eisenhower has placed before congressional leaders a series of proposals for completely overhauling the State and Defense Departments. It's about time. Here are two agencies which have spread their wings so far in recent years and taken on so many new employees that administrative efficiency has become a secondary consideration.

The projected shake-up of the Defense Department will increase civilian control of the agency and, in the words of Senator Taft, will give the secretary of Defense and the civilian secretaries of the armed services a "tighter grip on what is going on."

This may or may not entail a reorganization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff but it will at least place responsibility where it belongs. It should enable the department to put an end to the inter-service bickerings which have been instrumental in causing duplication of effort and waste of the taxpayers' money.

Under the plan, too, the State Department will become strictly a policymaking agency—which was its traditional role in former years. By relieving it of the burden of operating the Voice of America and the Point Four program, the proposals will provide the department with an opportunity to devote its entire attention to the vastly more important matter of international relations.

That the Departments of State and Defense include many more employees than are required and have on their lists many others who are not competent to do their jobs has been remarked by every congressional committee which has made a study of the two agencies. If Congress accepts the President's plan the way will be opened to the sorely needed house-cleaning.

Cheaper Beef

Pork quotations on the Chicago market have advanced 50 per cent in the last year, while beef prices dropped 35 per cent. This is one of the quirks of a mended up economic system, which is controlled, decontrolled, adjusted, readjusted, and just plain shoved and reshoved this way and that.

Consumers certainly have no complaint about prices for beef at the present time. They are not out of line with the general price level, unless they are too low, as cattlemen contend.

But there is a lack of the traditional synchronization of relative costs of beef and pork. This has already resulted in drops in pork sales in many cities, and a corresponding increase in demand for beef. Consumers can, of course, effect a reduction in pork prices as well as an increase in beef quotations by shifting from purchases of one to the other.

But a housewife who has toyed with meat substitutes for years is not likely to be deterred from buying steaks by fear that her action will result in higher prices. If steaks are to be had at prices people feel they can afford, there will be a great upsurge of this choice meat from meat counter to grill.

Foresight In Detecting Cancer

Each year, 75,000 lives could be saved by utilizing existing methods of treatment against cancer. In other words, we know how to cure the disease but far too many persons fail to take advantage of this knowledge or allow the malignancy to develop to the point where remedies are valueless. We ought to change our thinking from, "Won't it be wonderful when a cancer cure is found" and substitute, "Won't it be wonderful when a means of early detection is found." Here as elsewhere, foresight is better than hindsight.

Some cancers, such as those located on the skin are easy to diagnose. Others escape detection until it is too late and in this group malignancies of the stomach and intestinal tract are notorious. In these areas, the condition usually is painless in the early stages. Later, symptoms may be so slight or confusing that the individual who is otherwise healthy may decide they are not worth bothering with. Finally, the day of reckoning comes and frequently the outlook is grave.

What can we do about it? To start with, we should not neglect minor digestive symptoms that hang on. No one need be concerned about a twinge of pain that disappears within a short while, and the same can be said of temporary indigestion, nausea, or loss of appetite. But when discomfort persists for 10 days, it is high time to be on the alert and to report to the family physician. The periodic checkup also will help uncover malignancies in the beginning stage. Fifty per cent of all cancers of the gastrointestinal tract can be felt by the examining physician and a large percentage of these lesions is curable.

It might be possible to detect all early malignancies if everyone had a complete X-ray of the digestive tract each year. This procedure is ideal in theory but unwieldy in practice, so far as performing the tests on a nation-wide scale. A conscientious X-ray specialist needs from 15 to 20 minutes to examine a patient thoroughly for cancer. This does not take into consideration the time spent in interpreting the films and reporting the results. A tremendous army of physicians and technicians would be required to X-ray our population annually and it is doubtful whether one team could do more than 5,000 examinations a year. Furthermore, the job must be done carefully as the aim is to find small and early lesions that are amenable to treatment rather than large and full blown cancers.

The latter concern, Air Transit Services, Inc., located at 112½ 16th St., here, acts as a sort of money-changer for non-scheduled airlines. Most of them fly military passengers and freight for the government. And what Moore does is borrow money from American Security and Trust, then turn round and lend money to the nonskeds until they can collect from the slow-paying government.

The majority of mouth malignancies are inactive lesions in that they grow slowly and take years to spread. But still they are cancerous and unless treated will assume the upper hand ultimately. For this reason, any ulcerated area that fails to heal in three or four weeks should be investigated. Tumors of the esophagus lead to obstruction and one of the earliest symptoms is difficulty in swallowing. Later, the person encounters regurgitation, constipation, and malnutrition. Early manifestations of stomach cancer are indefinite. The usual illustration of a 40 to 50 year old man who has been enjoying excellent health; gradually he notes loss of weight; and appetite and then distress in the upper abdomen. He often disregards these clues until discomfort is aggravated by a sense of fullness and gnawing or aching pain. Involvement of the colon may be just as deceiving. Suspicion is aroused when an older person who has always been regular notes a change in bowel habits. This may take the form of constipation or alternate periods of constipation and diarrhea and blood in the stools. Physicians also are becoming aware of the fact that cancer of the rectum may masquerade as "bleeding piles."

HIGHER TAXES AND PRICES

New Deal tax policies, to be sure, seemingly did much to improve the dollar status of many workers. But executives earning over $10,000 were really mowed down. Take the $20,000-a-year man, as an example. In 1939-40 he had nearly $18,500 left after taxes. That's $3,000—a year retirement policy you were building in 1940, and on which you were planning to retire in 1960, will buy little more than $1,500 of rent and food and clothes today. Congress made its big mistake after the war when there was a shortage of goods and pent-up buying power. Right then and there the government should have pared its spending to the bone. Instead, we continued to spend, and in so doing built up further demand for civilian goods. Hence, things got badly out of control.

BUDGET SHOULD BE BALANCED

Truman's 1953-54 budget called for a $7-billion expenditure. That's $10 billion more than the government will take in, even at the present high tax rate. To balance the budget, $10 billion will have to be lopped off somewhere. This could very well come by reducing government pay rolls, tightening up a loosely run Veterans Administration, and stopping the pointless moving of military personnel from one side of the globe to another, then right back again!

Readers, however, must remember that any public economy program means firing a lot of people and perhaps starting the unemployment cycle. Congress may resist such economies. They don't like to see their constituents lose their jobs in either government or industry. Therefore, my present guess is that high taxes will continue. If so, we can meet them spiraling until prices today are nearly twice as high as they were in 1939-40.

Yes, but confine the exercise to walking to the couch or bed. Then lie down and relax.

WASHINGTON — Most meteoric career in Washington continues to be that of Lieut. Col. Gordon Moore, brother-in-law of the President.

Lady luck was not too kind to him a year ago. Then almost broke, he considered selling his house. During that hard-luck period, Moore was hired three times and fired twice within six months—as the political prospects of his famous brother-in-law ebbed and flowed.

Stock in the company was then selling for 12½ cents.

Thereupon entered Ike's brother-in-law. Immediately the stock began to zoom, sold for 36 cents a share one week after Colonel Moore became an executive. His own which lends money to small airlines.

Other important factors also contributed. One of these was the dynamic reorganization ability of Moore's live-wire partner, Fred Miller. Another was the financial backing of Gearhart and Otis, New York investment firm which bought in U. S. Air Lines' liabilities of $1,400,000 for $750,000. Another was the ability of Colonel Moore to help persuade Civil Aeronautics to reinstate U. S. Air Lines' certificate and allow it back in the business of small airlines.

In fairness, it should be noted that Colonel Moore didn't do the talking before CAB. But he tagged along and stood conspicuously in the background. Ordinarily the CAB drags out these appeals and jumps at any chance to squeeze a small airline out of business. In the case of U. S. Air Lines, however, the CAB couldn't move fast enough to help put it back on its feet.

It should also be noted that U. S. Air Lines, after refinancing and reorganizing, was entitled to a break with the CAB. This agency has been tough on some of the non-skied lines. Therefore, if the President's brother-in-law was able to cut CAB red-tape for this small line, it may set a helpful precedent for others.

NOTE — Moore's office wall is covered with a galaxy of photos, showing various stages of Ike's career, the Eisenhowers and the Moores together, plus a huge oil painting of the President in Army uniform. Like the autographed photos of famed five-percenter Col. Jim Hunt, who was investigated by Republicans, Moore's collection doesn't hurt him with prospective customers.

Gambling in New Jersey

For some weeks John J. Dickerson, Republican state chairman for New Jersey, has been threatening to sue me for libel because I reported on the radio Nov. 2:

"John Dickerson, Republican boss of New Jersey, has hushed up his connections with three notorious racketeers, at least until after elections. Dickerson was supposed to appear before the grand jury to explain his tie-up with Joe Adonis, Willie Moretti and Sal Moretti."

Last week, a New Jersey legislative committee elicited testimony from the same John Dickerson that Joe Adonis, now in a New Jersey prison; Willie Moretti, since died in a New Jersey jail, did visit him in the basement of his home in November 1950.

They were uninvited guests, Dickerson said, and came to protest that they had failed to get police protection for their gambling operations, for which they said they had paid $28,000 of protection money to New Jersey officials over the past 19 months.

Dickerson also admitted under oath that he received a $25,000 political loan from Joseph Bozzo of Passaic, N. J., friend of racketeers; and that he also had co-operated in the New Jersey elections with Frank Cardinale, described by the Kefauver Committee as a major Hoboken gambler.

This is the man who had the gall to threaten a libel suit.

CORRECTION — In fairness to another man who has not threatened a libel suit, I would like to make a correction. He is Congressman William Bray of Indiana, who with other congressmen flew home in an Air Force plane at Easter time. I now find that, although the congressman did request a free flight from the Air Force, he did so shortly after the town of Lewis in his district had suffered an explosion due to the wreck of an ammunition train. So it seems to me his request of the Air Force was justified, and I am happy to make this point entirely clear.

Longshoremen Pay-Off

It will come as a surprise, but the Senate Waterfront Investigating Committee will ask the Justice Department to bring criminal charges against Grace Steamship Line officials who paid off waterfront rackets.

Senate sleuths found that mobster Timmy O'Mara had drawn $25,604 from the Grace Lines under the fictitious name of Edward Joseph Ross. Though the racketeer did no work for the company, he drew the money as a "pay-off" to guarantee labor peace.

Who Was Loony Then?

WASHINGTON

She was a plump, raddled, foolishly bedizened middle-aged woman, strangely hung about with jeweled chains and little bits of lace and unexpected clumps of silk flowers. She was always escorted by at least one very young, very attentive officer of the Royal Air Force; and quite often there were two or three of these escorts.

The escorts submitted and even heavily responded to a continuous flow of coquetry. Quite often, when she had taken a glass or two of champagne above her limited capacity, the coquetry would be rather appallingly transformed into girlish flirtatiousness. Altogether you would have said—and indeed the world did say—that she was more ludicrous than pathetic, and just about as nutty as a fruitcake.

Certainly Lady Houston—for that was her name—was regarded as the prize bore and one of the very oddest fish among the decidedly odd clientele of the old Cavendish Hotel. These reporters saw her there when they spent a little time in the Cavendish in their salacious days.

It was an amusing place for unattached foreigners in London, the old Cavendish. You never knew who would turn up—whether Augustus John on a long night-out; or a couple of down-at-heel Edwardian dandies, full of tired gossip; or the last survivors of a court ball, the women glittering with diamonds, looking for a last drink after the legal closing hour. The owner of this half-bar, half-salon, Rosa Lewis, still retained clear traces of the beauty that had fascinated Edward VII. Whoever turned up, Rosa presided over the changing scene with an air of rakish grandeur.

Free World Indebted

When Lady Houston would heave into view with her RAF escort in tow, Rosa Lewis would murmur to her other guests, "ere comes the old trout again! Richest woman in England, she is! Now I ask you, has the good Lord any brains, the way he hands money out?"

The two old girls were nearly of an age, and had lived, one suspects, much the same sort of early life. But Lady Houston had made her fortune by marrying the richest, oldest shipping magnate in Britain, who then obligingly died. And Rosa Lewis had made hers by being a superlative cook, and persuading her two eminent friends, King Edward and Lord Ribblesdale, to launch her in the hotel business. Rosa Lewis did not like Lady Houston, but she welcomed her to the Cavendish for an excellent reason. The Cavendish rule was the rich and old paid for the refreshments of the young and poor. This custom, as Rosa used to say, "elped to keep things bright, you know." Lady Houston was obviously useful in view of this custom.

It may well be inquired why Lady Houston, now in her grave

these 17 years, should be commemorated at this length and in this manner. The answer is simple. Lady Houston signally contributed to Britain's survival. The whole free world owes her a considerable debt. And from her grave she points a moral for our own times, when the competing requirements of national defense and a balanced budget are again being debated.

The last years of Lady Houston were also the last years of Britain's imperial splendor, when the evidences of British wealth, the solidity of British self-confidence, still overwhelmed American travelers. It was the epoch of Stanley Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain. Sir John Simon and the rest—

These were the last years of Britain's first line of defense."

In those days, the doctrine that a balanced national budget was more important than national security led to the most ruthless blue-penciling of the Royal Air Force development program. Even the money to build the Spitfire prototype was taken from unattached foreigners in London, the old Cavendish.

Here as elsewhere, foresight is better than hindsight.

Inflations bring price rises—but not all prices rise at the same time or to the same degree. For instance, rents in the last 12 years have risen only slightly—due to government fiat—but obviously they cannot be held down indefinitely unless other prices recede.

There are sensitive commodities and sensitive goods, even sensitive services, that respond quickly to inflationary factors. Other commodities and goods are sluggish. So it may take years, after an initial stimulus, before the readjustment is complete.

When there are repeated stimuli it is impossible to predict when the process will end. There have been repeated stimuli since 1948, and especially since 1950. Perhaps the nation has not yet absorbed their full impact.

The bureau noted that prices had not risen appreciably by reason of removal of price controls. But that is true of consumer goods generally, not all wholesale prices. A few adjustments were necessary, and there may be others to come.

The encouraging aspect of the price situation is that prices have been relatively stable over a period of four months. If they continue to hold in the immediate weeks ahead, real stability may be possible.

Better Functioning

On the face of it, the work of the Rockefeller Committee, which is being used as a basis for the proposed reorganization of the State and Defense Departments, looks like a duplication in itself.

All this sort of thing was supposed to have been done by the Hoover Commission task force, which started operating five years ago. Actually, however, the Rockefeller group's purview has been the better functioning, rather than the more economical operation of government. With the former should come some of the latter.

The basic philosophy which has guided the overhauling of the State Department is one of getting that department out of operations and placing it back in the policy making business.

Thus, information and propaganda functions would be removed from State control and placed under a separate agency, called the U. S. Information Service, under the direction of Dr. Robert Johnson. Similarly, Point Four activities and other aid programs would be taken from State and handed to the Mutual Security Administration. MSA would be stripped of information activities.

In the Defense Department the problem was to revert to civilian control, a task roughly comparable to the labors of Hercules. The Rockefeller group proposed to sweep the overstuffed and rather turgid Munitions Board, and several other boards, right out the front doors of the Pentagon, lodging their responsibilities with key individuals with small staffs.

A process which would redefine the mission and responsibilities of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to bring them closer to the secretary of Defense, is something that has needed doing for almost as long as the Joint Chiefs setup has been in operation.

Detailed reorganization plans will be submitted to Congress quite soon, President Eisenhower has revealed.

Spring House-Cleaning

DROPPED KIDNEYS

Mrs. J. writes: What are the causes and the symptoms of fallen kidneys?

REPLY

Normally, the kidneys are held in place by fatty tissue. In the long, slender beanpole type of person, the structures may drop a little on standing because there is too little fat to hold them up. When this occurs there may be a dull aching sensation in the region of the kidneys. The cure is to gain weight or wear an abdominal support.

ROUGH JOINTS

L. N. writes: Would you tell me more about roughness in a joint? This is what my hip X-ray shows.

Body joints, I assume, are smooth as the pistons in an automobile. With wear and tear, however, they wrinkle, thicken, and become frayed. Such changes interfere with the action of the structure, making movements and weight bearing painful.

T. B. writes: Whenever I become tense or upset I develop pain in the chest and shoulder blades. Is there any exercise I could do to relieve this pain?

Yes, but confine the exercise to walking to the couch or bed. Then lie down and relax.

But Lady Houston had made her fortune by marrying the richest, oldest shipping magnate in Britain, who then obligingly died. And Rosa Lewis had made hers by being a superlative cook, and persuading her two eminent friends, King Edward and Lord Ribblesdale, to lunch her in the hotel business. Rosa Lewis did not like Lady Houston, but she welcomed her to the Cavendish for an excellent reason. The Cavendish rule was the rich and old paid for the refreshments of the young and poor. This custom, as Rosa used to say, "elped to keep things bright, you know." Lady Houston paid the bill for the Spitfire prototype out of her own pocket.

But the fact remains, Lady Houston and nobody else paid for the Spitfire prototype. If there had been no Spitfire prototype, there would have been no Spitfire squadrons. If there had been no Spitfire squadrons, the Messerschmitts would have won the Battle of Britain. If the RAF had been driven from the British air, Britain must have gone under. So who seems loony now, crazy Lady Houston, or the respectable Baldwins, Chamberlains and Simons, whose balanced budgets evoked such universal contemporary admiration?

Controversial Persons

In the radio and television industries, a category of human beings has been devised known as "the controversial person." By that is meant an actor, writer, commentator, etc., who has at some time in his life taken a position on public question which has attracted attention.

This is not new. During most of the New Deal, many Republicans were regarded as controversial persons. Even John T. Flynn, Fultor Lewis, Jr., and I were rejected as controversial persons at one time or another. Now, Communist, anti-Communist, friendly witnesses, unfriendly witnesses, men who at great risk testified truthfully before congressional committees, men who lied in the same places, are all lumped together as controversial persons. There is no adequate evaluation, no top level understanding of the problems, and no separation of the sheep from the goats. A rule of thumb decision to keep controversial people away from sponsorship and, if possible, off the air is the sole guide.

Men like these, whatever their past, are today valiant in their defense of their country. And that is all that counts. Yet, Robinson has been rejected by radio and television as a controversial person by some ignoramus who refuses to get at the facts.

Sooner or later, the radio and television advertising industries will have to accept the Motion Picture Program, which is the only one that has been effective. In the operation of this program, no lawyers, no fixers, no public relations counsel, no officials of the national associations of the motion picture industry were used in any

A little girl's enjoyment of a daily bath can be an important factor in her future beauty!

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Though beauty is the birthright of every little girl, it must be splashing, some anguish will be nurtured and cultivated each day assuaged by the knowledge that of her life. Untended or ignored, beauty slips away and then only returns after the most ardent solicitation.

It is most important that every little girl be started in life with the right beauty habits... and her beauty habits begin with her very first bath.

At first, health and cleanliness are the reasons for a tiny girl's daily bath — but beauty, in the stretch of years, is equally dependent upon her soap-and-water schedule. That's why it is so vital that young girl be introduced to bathing in such a fashion that they enjoy it. It must be a pleasure and not just a task or in the crucial years (teen and early teen) a girl may slight her ablutions.

Passing Muster

An ex-GI friend of mine has solved the morning wash-up problem by introducing a sort of Army game. When washed, dressed and dressed, the children rush to line up and vie to pass his inspection.

But even with a little girl, cleanliness never should become a bug-a-boo. Don't suds down every smudge she acquires. Let the dirt accumulate until playtime is over. Then she'll notice the dirt coming off and clean pink skin shining — and enjoy it.

The child who detests a scrubbing is one who has never been taught to revel in a bath. The child who luxuriates in cleanliness is sure to grow lovelier and lovelier!

Father Duffy, who was the chaplain, came up to him while the stretcher-bearers were trying to get him out of the range of German guns.

"Bill, you are badly hurt," said the priest. He then administered the last rites. The officer raised his head a little.

replied Donovan, "I will live to stand by your grave."

Actually, this prophecy came true. Then they thought he was going out of his head when he wheezed.

"Take my automatic out of the holster and lay it on my chest."

They did as he requested.

"What's the matter with you, Bill?" asked Father Duffy. "It's no more fighting you'll do today."

"I don't want to fight any more," agreed Bill. "What I'm thinking of is the regimental payroll I have with me. I'm afraid somebody may steal my wallet before I get back to the base hospital."

They carried him away with his pistol on his wishbone. Of course, he recovered, and was back on the firing line again before he should have been. Then he was the head of the OSS in the last war, making a great record of fearless behavior. Between times, he practices law in New York very successfully.

We got to talking about Will Rogers, the great cowboy comedian, the other night. He started with a pack of chewing gum, a horse and a rope and wound up one of the great humorists and philosophers of his time. He really got into the big money after he signed his first moving-picture contract.

"Now we can afford to eat dinner for supper," he remarked dryly.

The same evening we were discussing the game of poker.

"I never liked it," I said. Either you sit up all night trying to quit even or some others want you to so they can get their money back."

My friend, Ernest Cuneo, thought a minute and then remarked,

"Someone once described a poker game at 3 o'clock in the morning as follows:

"That's when the winners leisurely tell dirty jokes, and the losers impatiently holler, 'Let's deal!' "

One final crack which I may have used before. Damon Runyon was talking about his youthful days and said,

"I came from a town so small that when you saw an old geezer out with a girl who looked like his daughter, she probably was."

Mayor, Council Will Be Elected In Lonaconing

Alexander Opposed
By Evans In Top Fight

LONAConING—Voters of Lonaconing will go to the polls at the Town Hall between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. tomorrow to elect a mayor and three councilmen.

Some 924 citizens are registered to vote and observers expect a large percentage of them will mark ballots.

Candidates for mayor are the incumbent, Virgil Alexander, ending his first term, and John H. Evans, who previously was mayor for three terms, the last ending in 1949.

Six men are running for the three council posts. Among them are two incumbents, William H. Berry and James L. Nightengale, along with Isaac M. Bradburn, Nelson Humes, Harold McGregor and Robert W. Matthews.

All of those elected tomorrow will serve two-year terms.

Three of the present councilmen still have two years to go on their present terms. They are Douglas Waddell, Wilmoth Garlitz and John R. Merrbaugh.

Some critics of Mayor Alexander's administration point to the depletion of the town's cash balance in the past two years. They say that the town had a $7,000 surplus when former Mayor Aleck A. Burt stepped out two years ago. At the town's last council meeting the balance was reported as approximately $3,000.

Frostburg Church Group Meets Today

Halbert Resigns Beall Position

Vincent A. Halbert, principal of Beall High School in Frostburg since September of 1950, has accepted a position as principal of Trenton Senior (N.J.) High School.

He will assume his new post next fall and will complete his duties at Beall High next month, according to Ralph R. Webster, superintendent of Allegany County schools.

Halbert received his Bachelor of Arts degree and Master's Degree at Bucknell University in the mid 1930's. He taught at Williamsburg and Chester, Pa., and also served in the Navy during World War II.

In 1949 he came to Cumberland as assistant principal at Fort Hill High School. After one year there he was promoted to the principalship of Beall High.

Mayor, Council Will Be Elected In Lonaconing

Alexander Opposed
By Evans In Top Fight

LONACONING—Voters of Lonaconing will go to the polls at the Town Hall between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. tomorrow to elect a mayor and three councilmen.

Some 924 citizens are registered to vote and observers expect a large percentage of them will mark ballots.

Candidates for mayor are the incumbent, Virgil Alexander, ending his first term, and John H. Evans, who previously was mayor for three terms, the last ending in 1949.

Six men are running for the three council posts. Among them are two incumbents, William H. Berry and James L. Nightengale, along with Isaac M. Bradburn, Nelson Humes, Harold McGregor and Robert W. Mathews.

All of those elected tomorrow will serve two-year terms.

Three of the present councilmen still have two years to go on their present terms. They are Douglas Waddell, Wilmot Garlitz and John R. Merbaugh.

Some critics of Mayor Alexander's administration point to the depletion of the town's cash balance in the past two years. They say that the town had a $7,000 surplus when former Mayor Aleck A. Burt stepped out two years ago. At the town's last council meeting the balance was reported as approximately $3,000.

Pittsburgh's Astonishing Pirates Win Fifth Straight Game

Buccos Batter
Cardinals, 8-2,
Before 26,001

Johnny Lindell Bags
First Win Of Season,
Thomas Belts Homer

PITTSBURGH, May 3 (INS)—The astonishing Pittsburgh Pirates battered the St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 2, today to run their winning streak to five straight games before the season's largest Forbes Field attendance, 26,001.

Knuckleballing Johnny Lindell won his first decision of the year, setting the Cardinals down in order for the first five innings before Rip Repulski singled in the sixth for the first ball hit out of the infield by the Cards.

Stan Musial opened the seventh with a triple, and the Cardinals went on to score both their runs. Lindell allowed a total of four hits and contributed a double to a four-run Pittsburgh seventh that ended the game.

Frank Thomas homered for the Bucs in the fifth and drove in two more tallies with an eighth inning double to highlight the ten-hit attack on starter and loser Harvey Haddix and two St. Louis mound successors.

A Scotch Crosby Visits Ireland

DUBLIN The first thing that strikes you about the Irish is that they are terribly Irish—a whole green land full of Barry Fitzgeralds. In case Barry Fitzgerald ever wears out, there's lots more where he came from. The first man I laid eyes on in Dublin must have been his brother, or at very least, a close cousin.

The Irish have always been noted for a certain charming indifference to facts which don't fit into the framework of their national prejudices and I was a small example of this. They refused to accept the fact that I am not of Irish descent. When I was in London, the Irish Travel Agency phoned to say they heard John Crosby. I was going to Ireland and to ask whether I proposed to visit relatives. I explained that my forebears were Scotch, not Irish, but thanks anyway. There was a horrified pause at the other end and then: "Oh, but there are lots of Crosbys in Ireland. You must be related to some of them." I said no, I'm afraid I wasn't and rang off.

The next morning the Irish Press Agency phoned and I had to go through this all over again. Again I was told there were lots of Crosbys in Ireland. Well, I said, there was going to be one more Crosby in Ireland in a short time but he was not going to be an Irish Crosby, he was going to be a Scotch Crosby and I devoutly hoped the Scotch didn't mind.

This did no good whatsoever. The moment I landed in Ireland I was whisked off the airplane and taken to Ireland's lone radio station to be interviewed. I am not at all sure to this very day why the Irish wanted to interview me and I'm reasonably sure the Irish don't know either. The announcer who conducted the interview had no idea who I was or what I did or even what my name was. Kept calling me Crosby.

There was a preliminary bit of sparring in which we laid out a schedule which, if it had been adhered to, would have taken roughly four hours to get through. Then I discovered the interview was to last five minutes.

The interview began. What was I doing in Ireland? Well, to be honest about it, I was a little dim about this myself. If my thought processes were at all well ordered, I would be in Edinburgh, looking up Scotch Crosby's, rather than in Dublin. I stumbled badly here and the announcer went on to the next question. How did I like Ireland? Well, I said, I just got here. It was dark outside.

Next question: What did I propose to do in Ireland? That was a poser, too. I had no very clear idea then or now. I explained that I was one of the world's foremost authorities on the Irish saloons and that I wanted to investigate some of the local ones to see whether the brogue was any thicker in Dublin. (I later conducted this investigation and, as I suspected, the brogue is a lot more incomprehensible on Third Avenue than in Dublin.)

Anyhow, that terminated an interview that may easily have set Ireland radio back 12 years. And since Irish radio has not progressed much beyond Stonehenge, that is quite a feat. Ireland's lone radio station—there's another in North Ireland but let's not go into that—is located in three or four small bare rooms in the post office, which, as even a Scotch Crosby knows, is one of Ireland's most historic edifices, being the last citadel to succumb to the British in the Easter Rebellion of 1916. The microphone I spoke into was, I'm convinced, used by the Druids. It was the size of a cuspitor which it vaguely resembled; it was made of brass and I got very fond of it. If the Irish ever buy a new one (which is extremely unlikely), I wish they'd give me that one.

Outside the post office stands a tall pillar surmounted by a statue of a man. Who, I asked, is that? It was, of all people, Lord Nelson. What the devil, said I was Lord Nelson doing there, the Irish feeling as they do about the British? Well, it seems there are periodic attempts to take Lord Nelson down and put a more Irish hero up there. But the Irish always discover that it would cost more than they would care to pay. The British construct awfully stout monuments. So the Irish leave him there but they won't look up at him.

Later at dinner I was rhapsodizing on the quality of Irish butter about which I'd heard a great deal. I declared that I liked its dark yellow color, its consistency, its nutty flavor. Then an Irishman at my elbow explained that it was imported from New Zealand.

There was a preliminary bit of sparring in which we laid out a schedule which, if it had been adhered to, would have taken roughly four hours to get through. Then I discovered the interview was to last five minutes.

The interview began. What was I doing in Ireland? Well, to be honest about it, I was a little dim about this myself. If my thought processes were at all well ordered, I would be in Edinburgh, looking up Scotch Crosby's, rather than wanting to interview me and I'm reasonably sure the Irish don't know either. The announcer who conducted the interview had no idea who I was or what I did or even what my name was. Kept calling me Crosby.

A Scotch Crosby Visits Ireland

DUBLIN. I stumbled badly here and the announcer went on to the next question. How did I like Ireland? Well, I said, I just got here. It was dark outside.

Next question: What did I propose to do in Ireland? That was a poser, too. I had no very clear idea then or now. I explained that I was one of the world's foremost authorities on the Irish saloons and that I wanted to investigate some of the local ones to see whether the brogue was any thicker in Dublin. (I later conducted this investigation and, as I suspected, the brogue is a lot more incomprehensible on Third Avenue than in Dublin.)

Anyhow, that terminated an interview that may easily have set Ireland radio back 12 years. And since Irish radio has not progressed much beyond Stonehenge, that is quite a feat. Ireland's lone radio station—there's another in North Ireland but let's not go into that—is located in three or four small bare rooms in the post office, which, as even a Scotch Crosby knows, is one of Ireland's most historic edifices, being the last citadel to succumb to the British in the Easter Rebellion of 1916. The microphone I spoke into was, I'm convinced, used by the Druid. It was the size of a cupboard which it vaguely resembled; it was made of brass and I got very fond of it. If the Irish ever buy a new one (which is extremely unlikely), I wish they'd give me one.

Outside the post office stands a tall pillar surrounded by a statue of a man. Who, I asked, is that? It was, of all people, Lord Nelson. What the devil, said I, was Lord Nelson doing there, the Irish feeling as they do about the British? Well, it seems there are periodic attempts to take Lord Nelson down and put a more Irish hero up there. But the Irish always discover that it would cost more than they would care to pay.

The British construct awfully stout monuments. So the Irish leave him there but they won't look up at him.

Later at dinner I was rhapsodizing on the quality of Irish butter about which I'd heard a great deal. I declared that I liked its dark yellow color, its consistency, its nutty flavor. Then an Irishman at my elbow explained that it was imported from New Zealand.

Buck deer have been clocked at speeds of nearly 50 miles an hour.

This did no good whatsoever. The moment I landed in Ireland I was whisked off the airplane and taken to Ireland's lone radio station to be interviewed. I am not at all sure to this very day why the Irish wanted to interview me and I'm reasonably sure the Irish don't either. The announcer who conducted the interview had no idea who I was or what I did or even what my name was. Kept calling me Crosley.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our husband and father, Robert E. Brown, who died May 4, 1949.

God saw the road was getting rough,

The hills were bare and climbing steep.

He whispered: "Peace be thine."

His weary hours, his days of pain,

His weary nights are past;

His ever-patient, worn-out frame

Has found sweet rest at last.

Sadly missed by his loving wife

ABBY, sons, GEORGE, BENJAMIN, CLAUDE, JACK, daughters,

MARIE and ANITA.

Gov. McKeldin Appoints Cobey To School Board

Senator Kimble Recommends Action

W. Earle Cobey, prominent local attorney, has been appointed by Governor Theodore R. McKeldin to a five-year term on the Allegany County Board of Education beginning today.

State Senator Robert B. Kimble announced last night that he had recommended Cobey to the post and that Governor McKeldin has acted on his recommendation. He said that he will have Cobey's commission at the Court House here this morning.

Succeeds Wilson

The new board member succeeds Wilbur V. Wilson, also an attorney, who has served on the board for 12 years.

Allegany County has had a five-member Board of Education for two years, since Senator Kimble's bill became law. His measure provided that at least two members of the board should be women and at least two of the five should not belong to the same political party as the governor.

Cobey and Wilson both are Democrats. Other members of the board are Kenneth R. Malcolm, president, Westernport; Mrs. Albert C. Cook, Frostburg, and Mrs. Stanley Buckley, LaVale, all Republicans, and Edward J. Ryan, Frostburg, Democrat. The term of one member expires each year.

Was City Attorney

The new board member has been active in community affairs in Cumberland and Frostburg. He is a graduate of Princeton University and the Harvard Law School and has been a practicing attorney here since 1932.

Former city attorney of Cumberland, he is a member of First Presbyterian Church and the Cumberland Kiwanis Club. A native of Allegany County, he was born in Frostburg. He has lived in Cumberland since 1941. His home is at 519 Windsor Road, The Dingle. He has a personal interest in schools because his only daughter is a junior high school student at Allegany.

Fire Destroys McCole House

The home of Mrs. Albert Viney on McCole Hill was destroyed by fire yesterday morning.

Her son, Robert Viney, 29, who was asleep in the house when the fire started, was burned when he ran back into the dwelling to look for his mother, not knowing she was at a neighbor's house.

Viney was taken to Potomac Valley Hospital in Keyser for treatment of second and third degree burns.

The fire was believed to have started from faulty or damaged wiring. McCole and Keyser volunteer firemen responded but were unable to save the house or its furnishings.

PTA Council Meets Today

The Allegany County Council of Parent-Teachers Associations will hold its final meeting of the school year this evening at 8 o'clock at Mt. Savage High School.

It will be the first meeting of the group held outside of Cumberland for several years.

A delegate from each city and county school will be selected to represent the council at the summer conference in July at the University of Maryland, College Park.

Awards will be presented to each local association that has had five delegates to all four county council meetings during the school year. The award is one half the cost of expenses of a delegate to the summer conference.

A tour of the new Mt. Savage School will conclude the session. Music and devotions will be in charge of Mrs. Stanley Buckley.

The group's executive committee will meet at 7:45 p.m. today, prior to the regular session.

Weather

The Cumberland area enjoyed another "summer" day yesterday with clear skies and plenty of sunshine. Highways were jammed with Sunday motorists, parks were crowded with strollers and picnickers, and the skies even had several privately owned airplanes. High yesterday was 78 according to Constitution Park weather station, low was 49 and at 9 p.m., mercury stood at 69 degrees. Humidity at 6 p.m. was a dry 29 per cent. Forecast today is partly cloudy and mild.

Mrs. Houck reports that the bush is over 17 years old and the blue lilacs this year are as beautiful as they ever have been.

City Is Pleased With SRC Plans For Belt Route

Highway May Be Linked With Parkway

The roadway planned by the State Roads Commission on the route of the proposed Industrial Highway is a better road than the city could afford, local officials reported this week.

The state is planning a standard state highway following the approximate route prepared by the city.

Last week, Norman M. Pritchett, chief location engineer for the State Roads Commission, conferred with C. R. Nuzum on the city's plans for the belt route.

Get City Plans

Mayor Roy W. Eves said the SRC plans for the Industrial Highway are "pretty well developed." Some time ago, the city turned its plans over to the state so all available data could be correlated.

In general, the SRC is following its plans made during a 1950 traffic survey, which calls for a central to southeast highway beginning on Oldtown Road near the city limits, running with the east side of the B & O tracks to Montreal Avenue and Fifth Street to Thomas Street, across the B & O tracks and along the bed of the C & O Canal to connect with the crosstown bridge at a point near Wills Creek.

Traffic Is Heavy

The SRC has indicated it may be possible to link the Industrial Highway with the Canal Parkway, the mayor said.

Traffic on the Oldtown Road is far ahead of estimates for 1953, the SRC pointed out.

Much of the route will be a dual highway of standard construction — far beyond any city plans for the route designed to open up industrial sites and aid in the expansion of South Cumberland.

Rotary Meets Tomorrow

"The Case of Tommy Tucker" will be presented tomorrow at 12:15 p.m. at Central YMCA during the luncheon meeting of the Cumberland Rotary Club.

Seventeen Garrett Firemen Complete Training Course

Seventeen volunteer firemen of Maryland, spoke during a banquet Saturday evening at the social hall of Kitzmiller Fire Department upon completion of a 60 hour basic fire instruction course.

Ten of the men were from Kitzmiller and seven from Deer Park. Toastmaster for the occasion was Cromwell C. Zembower, past president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association who was instructor for the course.

M. E. McBride, Takoma Park, member of the fire training committee of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, presented pocket award cards to the following members of the class:

Melvin Arnold, Wilbur Burrill, Erwin Green, Gerald Iman, Carl Mosser, William Sharpless, Mervin Sims, Andrew Wilson and Wendell Wilson, of Kitzmiller; P. G. Arnold Gordon Bray, Charles Haines, Glen O'Brien, E. W. Roth, Howard Roth and J. R. Thrasher, of Deer Park.

Robert C. Byrus, director of the Kitzmiller Fire Company.

The course consisted of classroom work and outside evolution on basic fundamentals of fire control and use of firemen's tools and equipment.

A social hour followed the banquet prepared and served by the Auxiliary Unit of the Kitzmiller Fire Company.

Traffic Control System May Be Adopted Here

Would Be Synchronized With Automatic Gates

City officials are expected to give serious consideration to a traffic control system for Henderson Avenue if the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad installs automatic crossing gates at four of its crossings.

The B&O has said it would like to remove its watchmen from Henderson Avenue crossings at Knox, Valley, Pear and Franklin streets and replace them with automatic crossing gates.

A proposed new crossings ordinance would make such gates and signals a legal substitute for watchmen at the above crossings.

May Be Adopted

If the plan goes through, the Mayor and Council will bring up for reconsideration a suggestion of the State Roads Commission and the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads that traffic lights be installed along Henderson Avenue.

That proposal was included in a report two years ago following an intensive survey of Cumberland's traffic problems in 1949 and 1950.

Included in the Henderson Avenue recommendations was a proposal that Bedford Street be made a one-way southbound street in order to eliminate one stop sign from the avenue. That would be possible because only the traffic coming from the direction of the crossing now has automatic right of way over vehicles on the avenue.

The report also included a proposal that the crossings at Knox and Pear streets be closed and that traffic normally using these crossings use the wider, improved Valley Street crossing.

Would Speed Traffic

If that were done, the report declared, then automatic traffic signals could be installed at the Frederick, Bedford and Valley street crossings.

The signals would be so arranged as to provide automatic green signals for traffic coming across the tracks if a train were approaching. After a certain time interval, in which all vehicles could clear the crossing, the lights would give unbroken green signals to traffic along the avenue as long as the train remained on the tracks.

After the train had passed, all four faces of the lights would resume normal timed operation.

The report pointed out that this would do away with the present interruption in the flow of traffic along the avenue because of stop signs which are in effect even when a train blocks the crossings.

Attend Meeting

Among those who addressed the meeting were Department Commander Joseph Fields, Silver Spring; Department Adjutant Dan Burkhardt, Baltimore; Mrs. Vernon Randall, Pikesville, department president of the Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Harriett W. Tipton, Baltimore, department chairman.

The speakers explained the nature of the child welfare work now being sponsored in various sections of Maryland and all urged the formation of district child welfare coordinating commissions with the American Legion and its various auxiliaries participating in one group.

The meeting was attended by members of several posts in the Mountain District in addition to the large delegation of departmental officials.

Freed POW To Visit Family Of Cumberland Red Prisoner

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa., May 3.—A returned Maryland prisoner of war says he'll visit relatives of eight Marylanders still prisoners in Korea.

The group, he said, includes one from Cumberland and two from Annapolis.

PFC Robert C. Stell, of Baltimore, the first Marylander freed by the Communists is recuperating here at the army's Valley Forge Hospital.

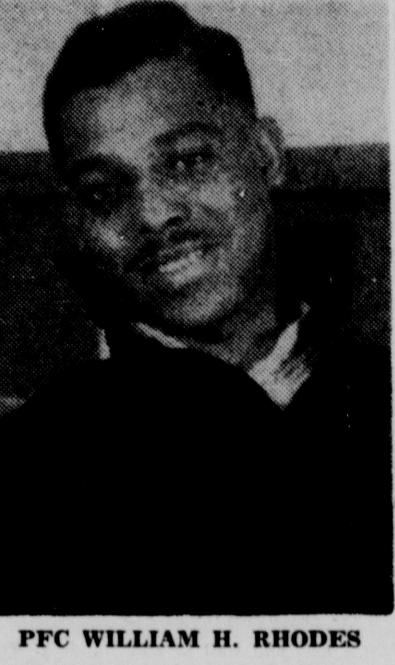

Among the names Stell has listed in a notebook is William Rhodes, 180 Wineo Street, Cumberland. It was in the list of Marylanders Stell said he plans to see soon to tell them of their kin in Korea.

"It's Good News"

The last time the local prisoner's mother, Mrs. Mary Jane Rhodes, 180 Wineo Street, received word from her son was in early January of this year.

Mrs. Rhodes said her son, Pfc. William H. Rhodes, 31, sent her several small Christmas cards informing her that he was well and that he hoped everyone in Cumberland was well too.

The mother said the cards were small and looked as if they had been purchased from the Reds.

When told last night that the returned POW's had talked with her son, she said she was glad and thanked God her son was still alive. "It's not the best news, but it's good news," she said.

Youth Is Killed In Cycle Mishap Near Grantsville

Daniel C. Oester Accident Victim

A young motorcyclist was killed and his companion injured yesterday afternoon when both were thrown from a cycle near Grantsville on Route 40.

The victim was identified by Maryland State Police as Daniel Conrad Oester, 19, of Springs, Pa., three miles north of Grantsville. Suffering a possible fracture of the skull and admitted to Community Hospital, Meyersdale, is Robert Rodamer, 17, also of Springs.

He suffered facial injuries, contusions of the head and a possible fracture of the skull. His condition last night was reported by police as "good".

Loses Control

The accident, police said, occurred at 2:45 p.m. about a quarter of a mile east of Grantsville as the cyclists were traveling toward Frostburg. Tfc. Glen Folke, of the Maryland State Police, was on patrol duty near the scene and arrived minutes after the accident.

Oester, he said, lived about 10 minutes following the mishap.

Trooper Folke said the two boys were traveling upgrade at the time of the accident and had attempted to pass an auto going in the same direction. An oncoming car driven by Harvey Hetrick, of Grantsville, caused Oester to swing back into the right lane and as he did so the cycle apparently got out of control and skidded about 50 feet across the highway.

Slides Into Field

Meanwhile Hetrick saw the cyclists and pulled over to the side of the highway and the motorcycle slid into a field within four feet of the auto, police said.

Also investigating with Folke was Trooper Blair Buckle. This is the second fatal accident in the Grantsville area in eight days.

Last Sunday three-year-old Darrell Hare, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hare of that community died on the way to a Meyersdale hospital after being struck by an auto on State Route 495 about 12 miles south of Grantsville.

Oester is survived by his parents, Lewis and Ruth (Miller) Oester and another brother. He graduated last June from Salisbury, Pa., High School. The body is at the Winterberg Funeral Home, Grantsville.

Farm Income Set Back As Prices Skid

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Skidding prices for milk, beef, eggs and truck crops set Maryland farm income back eight index points from mid-March to mid-April, continuing a steady decline.

The Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the University of Maryland's Farm Extension Service announced the decline yesterday. They said, however, that prices farmers had to pay for commodities they needed dipped two points, softening the effect of the income drop.

The index of farm prices sets up an average price of farm commodities between 1909 and 1914 at 100 points. In April, 1952, Maryland farm prices totaled 314 points. By March 15 this year, they dropped to 287. On April 15, the index was 279.

Prices paid out also stand at 279 in the index, leaving the Maryland farmer at "parity" with the market, as far as the farm statisticians are concerned.

Truck crops showed a seasonal drop in the price index, from 284 to 268. But much more felt was the 14-point drop in dairy products. Milk declined 40 cents per hundredweight at wholesale, dropping the index from 276 to 272.

Meat animals registered a 5-point drop from mid-March to mid-April. Calves were down $1 a hundred pounds, beef cattle 60 cents a hundred, hog prices increased 20 cents.

The chicken and egg index fell from 196 to 190. Chicken prices held almost steady, but eggs were off 2 cents a dozen.

Hancock Man Killed In Auto Crash

Lowndes W. Roman Services Wednesday

A 57-year-old Hancock orchard foreman was killed Saturday night when his car smashed against the rear of a parked vehicle on U.S. Route 40, about 10 miles west of Hancock.

The victim was identified as Lowndes W. Roman, Hancock.

State Trooper Harold P. O'Brien, who investigated, said Roman's car, headed west on Siding Hill Mountain, failed to make a curve and struck the rear of a vehicle parked on the shoulder of the road.

Trooper O'Brien said the occupants of the parked car, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bisbing, Gettysburg, Pa., had stopped and gotten out to look at the scenery. He added Roman was apparently traveling at a great rate of speed when his auto rammed the other car. The mishap occurred about 8:30 p.m.

Dr. Robert Wells, Washington County deputy medical examiner, said death was caused by a crushed chest.

Roman was a son of the late Richard and Sarah (Miller) Roman. An orchard foreman for the past 30 years, he was employed by Jack Casper, orchard owner at Hancock. He was a member of Hancock Camp 53, Woodmen of the World.

Surviving are one son, Lloyd L.

Traffic Control System May Be Adopted Here

Would Be Synchronized With Automatic Gates

City officials are expected to give serious consideration to a traffic control system for Henderson Avenue if the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad installs automatic crossing gates at four of its crossings.

The B&O has said it would like to remove its watchmen from Henderson Avenue crossings at Knox, Valley, Pear and Franklin streets and replace them with automatic crossing gates.

A proposed new crossings ordinance would make such gates and signals a legal substitute for watchmen at the above crossings.

May Be Adopted

If the plan goes through, the Mayor and Council will bring up for reconsideration a suggestion of the State Roads Commission and the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads that traffic lights be installed along Henderson Avenue.

That proposal was included in a report two years ago following an intensive survey of Cumberland's traffic problems in 1949 and 1950.

Included in the Henderson Avenue recommendations was a proposal that Bedford Street be made a one-way southbound street in order to eliminate one stop sign from the avenue.
